Esther's Early Life

Esther was born into a Jewish family in the Persian Empire. Her parents died when she was young, and she was raised by her cousin, Mordecai. Mordecai was a high-ranking official in the Persian court, and he taught Esther the importance of her Jewish heritage.

When Esther was young, the Persian king, Ahasuerus, held a beauty contest to find a new queen. Esther was chosen as one of the contestants, and she quickly became the favorite. She was crowned queen in 478 BC.

Esther's Courage

Esther's courage was tested when she learned that the king's prime minister, Haman, was planning to exterminate all the Jews in the Persian Empire. Mordecai urged Esther to go to the king and plead for the lives of her people.
