If you want to understand men better and become their first option, it's important to learn to speak their language. This doesn't mean that you have to start using the same words or phrases that they do. It simply means that you need to be aware of the unspoken cues that they give off and how to interpret them.

The Unspoken Cues of Men

Men communicate in a variety of ways, both verbal and nonverbal. Here are some of the most common unspoken cues that they give off:

- Eye contact: Men make eye contact when they are interested in someone. If a man is avoiding eye contact with you, it could be a sign that he's not interested or that he's uncomfortable.
- Body language: Men's body language can tell you a lot about how they are feeling. If a man is standing up straight with his shoulders back, it's a sign that he is confident and interested. If he is slouching or avoiding eye contact, it could be a sign that he is unsure of himself or that he's not interested.
- Touch: Men use touch to communicate in a variety of ways. A light touch on the arm or shoulder can be a sign of affection or interest. A more aggressive touch, such as a grab or a push, can be a sign of anger or aggression.
- Tone of voice: Men's tone of voice can also be telling. A soft, gentle voice can be a sign of interest or affection. A loud, aggressive voice can be a sign of anger or frustration.
