Water balloon wars are a classic summer activity that can be enjoyed by kids of all ages. But for kids ages 12 and up, these battles can be taken to the next level with a little bit of planning and creativity.

Here are some ideas for how to make your next water balloon war the most epic one yet:

1. Set up a target range

One of the best ways to make water balloon wars more challenging and exciting is to set up a target range. This can be done by setting up a series of targets, such as cones, buckets, or even just trees, and then having the kids try to hit them with their water balloons.

You can also make the target range more challenging by adding obstacles, such as chairs, tables, or even a small pool. This will make it more difficult for the kids to hit their targets, but it will also make the game more fun.

2. Create a water balloon toss

Another fun way to play water balloon wars is to create a water balloon toss. This can be done by having the kids stand in a circle and then tossing water balloons to each other. The goal is to keep the water balloons in the air as long as possible.

You can make the water balloon toss more challenging by using different sizes and shapes of water balloons. You can also make it more fun by adding music or by having the kids wear silly hats or costumes.

3. Play water balloon dodgeball

Water balloon dodgeball is a great way to get some exercise while cooling off on a hot summer day. This game is played just like regular dodgeball, but with water balloons instead of balls.

To play water balloon dodgeball, you will need two teams of at least six players each. The game is played on a court that is about the size of a volleyball court. The goal of the game is to hit the other team's players with water balloons until they are all out.

4. Have a water balloon treasure hunt

A water balloon treasure hunt is a great way to get the kids moving and having fun. To play this game, you will need to hide a number of water balloons around your backyard. Then, give the kids a list of clues that will help them find the balloons.

The first team to find all of the water balloons wins the game. You can make the game more challenging by hiding the water balloons in difficult-to-find places or by adding obstacles to the course.

5. Play water balloon tag

Water balloon tag is a classic game that is always a lot of fun. To play this game, you will need at least two players. One player is designated as the "it" player. The other players run around trying to avoid getting hit by the "it" player with a water balloon.

If a player is hit by a water balloon, they become the new "it" player. The game continues until all of the players have been hit by a water balloon.

Safety tips

Water balloon wars can be a lot of fun, but it is important to follow some safety tips to avoid any accidents.

- Always use clean water balloons.
- Never throw water balloons at someone's face.
- Be careful not to slip and fall on wet surfaces.
- Have a designated area for water balloon wars.
- Make sure there is plenty of adult supervision.

With a little bit of planning and creativity, you can make your next water balloon war the most epic one yet. So get ready to have some fun and cool off on a hot summer day!
